Continue

2023's horror movie schedule is filled with both established franchises and fresh, original ideas, promising a thrilling and diverse lineup for horror enthusiasts. From a highly anticipated Exorcist sequel to a time-traveling horror-comedy, the upcoming releases offer a range of captivating storylines and casts that will surely leave audiences on the edge of their seats. The booming success of horror films in recent years makes 2023 a promising year for horror fans, with plenty of scares and surprises in store. All the upcoming horror movies of 2023 represent an epic slate of frightening features that offers a variety of chills for every kind of moviegoer. 2022 was a solid year for horror, and for every tonally awkward failure like Texas Chainsaw Massacre, there was a Scream, Nope, or Fresh to remind viewers that the genre still has endless potential. 2023's horror movie schedule continues the upward trend for the genre, setting up the 2020s as a golden decade for audiences who enjoy a good scare. 2023's horror movies see a new entry in the Insidious film series, and legendary franchises like The Exorcist are also making a comeback. Though established horror properties are well-represented, it is the wholly original movies that have generated the most buzz as plenty of fresh ideas flood the screen. The genre is thriving so much that even Disney is getting in on the horror movie action, albeit in a much more family-friendly way. While some are more noteworthy than others, the upcoming horror movie schedule promises to make 2023 a banner year for the genre. Related 2023's best horror movie Talk to Me has become a huge box office hit, providing even more proof of the genre's impressive financial comeback. The Exorcist: Believer — October 6, 2023 As if rebooting one beloved horror cinema franchise wasn’t enough, Halloween 2018’s David Gordon Green is hoping lightning will strike twice with a sequel to 1973’s iconic classic, The Exorcist. Few 2023 scary movies have as many expectations as The Exorcist: Believer and it will be tough for any sequel to recreate the impact of William Friedkin’s terrifying original. However, if anyone can make an Exorcist sequel/reboot work, it’s Green and his Halloween team. The Blumhouse production arrives in October 2023 with a cast that includes Leslie Odom Jr. as a man who is seeking help for a possessed child and original Exorcist star, Ellen Burstyn. Paramount expands the Stephen King universe in October 2023 with Pet Sematary: Bloodlines. The movie is a prequel to 2019's Pet Sematary and follows a young Jud Crandall, played by John Lithgow previously, as he discovers the infamous supernatural cemetery. Jackson White now takes over as the young Jud to headline a cast that includes David Duchovny and Pam Grier, among others. Pet Sematary: Bloodlines marks the directorial debut of Lindsey Anderson Beer, who co-wrote the script with Jeff Buhler. The Pet Sematary prequel debuts on Paramount+ exclusively on October 6, 2023. Totally Killer is a new horror movie in 2023 from Jason Blum and Blumhouse. It stars Kiernan Shipka as a daughter who travels back in time to team-up with a younger version of her mom, played by Olivia Holt, to defeat the Sweet Sixteen Killer. Totally Killer is a comedy horror movie from director Nahnatchka Khan (Always Be My Maybe) and also includes Julie Bowen and Randall Park among its cast. The scary movie arrives on Prime Video on October 6, 2023. Dark Harvest has had several scrapped released dates, with the most recent being September 22, 2022. Based on Norman Partridge's eponymous novel, Dark Harvest concerns a specter named Sawtooth Jack who goes up against violent gangs of boys hoping to take down the supernatural creature once and for all. The horror movie boasts a stellar cast, with the likes of Elizabeth Reaser, Jeremy Davies, Luke Kirby, and Ezra Buzzington, but the upcoming scary movie now has a limited one-night-only theatrical release on October 11, 2023, through Alamo Drafthouse before a digital release on October 13. Night of the Hunted is a new horror movie arriving on Shudder later this year. From director Franck Khalfoun (Amityville: The Awakening), Night of the Hunted stars Camille Rowe as a young woman who becomes caught in deadly events at night after stopping at a gas station. The horror movie releasing on Shudder on October 20, 2023, means subscribers can experience the new thrilling story right before Halloween. Five Nights at Freddy's has been in development for close to a decade, and the announcement that it would be released in 2023 came as quite a surprise. The movie is based on the popular video game of the same name, which is about a nighttime employee of Freddy Fazbear's Pizza, a Chuck E. Cheese's-inspired children's restaurant. The animatronic mascots of the restaurant come to life and kill anyone in the restaurant after midnight. The Five Nights at Freddy's cast includes Josh Hutcherson, Elizabeth Lail, and Matthew Lillard, and it promises to be one of the most bizarre new horror movies of 2023. Netflix is participating in the 2023 horror movie release schedule with Sister Death. The Spanish horror movie comes from director Paco Plaza and is a prequel to his 2017 horror movie Verónica. Sister Death follows a nun named Narcisa (Aria Bedmar) as she joins a school to teach young girls before unexpected events occur. Those looking for some non-American scary stories around Halloween can look no further than Sister Death. After a children's fantasy movie and a documentary, Thanksgiving marks a return to horror for Hostel director Eli Roth, several years after 2018's Death Wish. The upcoming 2023 scary movie Thanksgiving follows a serial killer in Massachusetts who attempts to make a carving board out of unsuspecting victims. Just like Machete and Hobo with a Shotgun, it is based on one of the Grindhouse fake trailers in the Robert Rodriguez and Quentin Tarantino collaboration from 2007. While a horror movie might not evoke the spirit of the season, Thanksgiving is expected to be released close to its eponymous holiday. In addition to all the scary movies still to come this year, there have also been dozens already released. Here are the 2023 horror movies that were previously released in theaters or on a streaming service: M3GAN on January 6, 2023 Candy Land on January 6, 2023 The Price We Pay on January 10, 2023 The Offering on January 13, 2023 Skinamarink on January 13, 2023 The Devil Conspiracy on January 13, 2023 There's Something Wrong With the Children on January 17, 2023 Infinity Pool on January 27, 2023 Fear on January 27, 2023 Blood on January 31, 2023 Knock at the Cabin on February 3, 2023 Murder, Anyone? on February 7, 2023 Mean Spirited on February 7, 2023 Attachment on February 9, 2023 The Outwaters on February 9, 2023 Daughter on February 10, 2023 Consecration on February 10, 2023 The Way Out on February 10, 2023 She Came From the Woods on February 10, 2023 Husersa: The Bone Woman on February 13, 2023 Swallowed on February 14, 2023 Winnie-the-Pooh: Blood and Honey on February 15, 2023 We Have A Ghost on February 24, 2023 Bunker on February 24, 2023 Wolf Garden on February 28, 2023 Spoonful of Sugar on March 2, 2023 Hunt Her, Killer Her on March 3, 2023 Children of the Corn on March 3, 2023 Unseen on March 7, 2023 Sound of Silence on March 9, 2023 Scream VI on March 10, 2023 Stalker on March 24, 2023 Followers on March 24, 2023 Adalynn on March 28, 2023 Enys Men on March 31, 2023 Summoning Sylvia on March 31, 2023 Malum on March 31, 2023 Forest of Death on March 31, 2023 The Unheard on March 31, 2023 You're Killing Me on April 7, 2023 Renfield on April 14, 2023 The Pope's Exorcist on April 14, 2023 Phenomena on April 14, 2023 Nefarious on April 14, 2023 Nightmare Radio: The Night Stalker on April 18, 2023 Evil Dead Rise on April 21, 2023 The Tank on April 21, 2023 The Black Demon on April 28, 2023 Clock on April 28, 2023 Influencer on May 26, 2023 Tin & Tina on May 26, 2023 The Wrath of Becky on May 26, 2023 The Boogeyman on June 2, 2023 Follow Her on June 2, 2023 Brooklyn 45 on June 9, 2023 The Angry Black Girl And Her Monster on June 9, 2023 The Blackening on June 16, 2023 Run Rabbit Run on June 28, 2023 Insidious: The Red Door on July 7, 2023 The Breach on July 11, 2023 Final Cut on July 14, 2023 Cobweb on July 21, 2023 Sympathy For The Devil on July 28, 2023 The Haunted Mansion on July 28, 2023 The Last Voyage of the Demeter on August 11, 2023 Slotherhouse on August 30, 2023 Perpetrator on September 1, 2023 Beaten to Death on September 1, 2023 The Nun 2 on September 8, 2023 Good Boy on September 8, 2023 Megalomaniac on September 8, 2023 Talk to Me on September 12, 2023 Satanic Hispanics on September 14, 2023 A Haunting In Venice on September 15, 2023 No One Will Save You on September 22, 2023 It Lives Inside on September 22, 2023 Saw X on September 29, 2023 Want to know which horror movies 2023 has to offer? Look no further, because we have made a list of the horror movies (and thrillers) that have been given release dates in 2023, so far. The list of scary movies coming out in 2023 will no doubt be expanded though. From experience, we also know that some will be pulled and never see a theatrical release. That’s the true horror of making movies right now. But hey, some genre films end up getting a lot more success from a digital or streaming release instead. Sure, it’s not as prestigious, but a filmmaker like Mike Flanagan has managed to build quite a career working both with streaming services (first Netflix, next Prime Video) and theatrical releases (i.e. Doctor Sleep) As we know changes will happen, we will be updating the list of new horror movies in 2023 regularly. Both with date changes and possible release platform changes. In other words, be sure to bookmark this page to stay updated! So, let’s get to it, shall we?! You’ll find the list featuring the upcoming thriller and horror movies coming out in 2023 below.Page 2 I know that the names Scott Beck and Bryan Woods immediately lead to A Quiet Place. However, they “only” wrote that movie. John Krasinski helped finish the script and directed the movie. And A Quiet Place 2 for that matter. However, to me, Scott Beck and Bryan Woods are also the brilliant duo behind the fierce Halloween horror thriller Haunt (2019). A movie they co-wrote and co-directed. These two filmmakers clearly have everything needed to make a brilliant blockbuster. So why doesn’t 65 work better? I just can’t shake the feeling that this story could just as well have played out a few decades ago on our planet. Say in a jungle where there are plenty of things that could kill human beings as well. The only reason 65 is set on our planet 65 million years ago, is so that we can watch dinosaurs. Also, the biggest mystery for me, is how a movie that has a runtime of just around 90 minutes, can be anything less than a whirlwind of dinosaur action scenes. Surely, this could have been the case, but it just isn’t. Yet, if you can, you should absolutely watch this in a movie theater. If not, it’s still fine to watch at home, when it’s released digitally. Now that is something I never expected to say about a sci-fi action movie with dinosaurs. 65 is out in theaters in the US (and many other countries) from March 10, 2023. Delving into the realm of terror and suspense in films, 2023’s best horror movies boast narratives that will make your blood run cold. The roster of films slated for release is an array of spine-chilling masterpieces, testament to the evolution of a genre defined by its ability to engage the audience by the grip of dread, fear, or horror. The films incite heart-stopping moments of suspense, creating a rich fabric of stories that push the boundaries of the genre while delivering gut-wrenching thrills.Each of the great horror movies in 2023 bears its own unique imprint of terror. Brilliant storytelling coupled with pulse-pounding horror distinguish these works as contemporaneous classics. At the heart of each film lies an intricate web of plot, character development, and atmospherics designed to transport audiences into a realm of the uncanny and disturbing.Highlighted within this distinguished selection are the movies Talk to Me, Evil Dead Rise, and Scream 6, each contributing weighty narratives to the horror movie landscape of 2023. Talk to Me combines hair-raising suspense with cerebral intrigue, while Evil Dead Rise reinvigorates the franchise with new blood-curdling surprises. Additionally, the latest chapter in the Scream series continues to push the envelope and reaffirms its place among the scariest movies of 2023. These are but a few exemplars that characterize the compelling breadth and depth of this year’s horror offerings.The assemblage of these cinematic horror pieces for 2023 paints a vivid tableau of a genre keeping audiences on the edge of their seats. This compilation represents an homage to classic horror tropes while also pushing forward with innovative storytelling methods and unnerving visual aesthetics. This ensures that every chilling moment, every ominous creaking floorboard, and every lurking shadow is masterfully orchestrated to craft the perfect cinematic nightmare.Over 800 Ranker voters have come together to rank this list of The 45+ Best Horror Movies In 2023, Ranked 2023's horror movie schedule is filled with both established franchises and fresh, original ideas, promising a thrilling and diverse lineup for horror enthusiasts. From a highly anticipated Exorcist sequel to a time-traveling horror-comedy, the upcoming releases offer a range of captivating storylines and casts that will surely leave audiences on the edge of their seats. The booming success of horror films in recent years makes 2023 a promising year for horror fans, with plenty of scares and surprises in store. All the upcoming horror movies of 2023 represent an epic slate of frightening features that offers a variety of chills for every kind of moviegoer. 2022 was a solid year for horror, and for every tonally awkward failure like Texas Chainsaw Massacre, there was a Scream, Nope, or Fresh to remind viewers that the genre still has endless potential. 2023's horror movie schedule continues the upward trend for the genre, setting up the 2020s as a golden decade for audiences who enjoy a good scare. 2023's horror movies see a new entry in the Insidious film series, and legendary franchises like The Exorcist are also making a comeback. Though established horror properties are well-represented, it is the wholly original movies that have generated the most buzz as plenty of fresh ideas flood the screen. The genre is thriving so much that even Disney is getting in on the horror movie action, albeit in a much more family-friendly way. While some are more noteworthy than others, the upcoming horror movie schedule promises to make 2023 a banner year for the genre. Related 2023's best horror movie Talk to Me has become a huge box office hit, providing even more proof of the genre's impressive financial comeback. The Exorcist: Believer — October 6, 2023 As if rebooting one beloved horror cinema franchise wasn’t enough, Halloween 2018’s David Gordon Green is hoping lightning will strike twice with a sequel to 1973’s iconic classic, The Exorcist. Few 2023 scary movies have as many expectations as The Exorcist: Believer and it will be tough for any sequel to recreate the impact of William Friedkin’s terrifying original. However, if anyone can make an Exorcist sequel/reboot work, it’s Green and his Halloween team. The Blumhouse production arrives in October 2023 with a cast that includes Leslie Odom Jr. as a man who is seeking help for a possessed child and original Exorcist star, Ellen Burstyn. Paramount expands the Stephen King universe in October 2023 with Pet Sematary: Bloodlines. The movie is a prequel to 2019's Pet Sematary and follows a young Jud Crandall, played by John Lithgow previously, as he discovers the infamous supernatural cemetery. Jackson White now takes over as the young Jud to headline a cast that includes David Duchovny and Pam Grier, among others. Pet Sematary: Bloodlines marks the directorial debut of Lindsey Anderson Beer, who co-wrote the script with Jeff Buhler. The Pet Sematary prequel debuts on Paramount+ exclusively on October 6, 2023. Totally Killer is a new horror movie in 2023 from Jason Blum and Blumhouse. It stars Kiernan Shipka as a daughter who travels back in time to team-up with a younger version of her mom, played by Olivia Holt, to defeat the Sweet Sixteen Killer. Totally Killer is a comedy horror movie from director Nahnatchka Khan (Always Be My Maybe) and also includes Julie Bowen and Randall Park among its cast. The scary movie arrives on Prime Video on October 6, 2023. Dark Harvest has had several scrapped released dates, with the most recent being September 22, 2022. Based on Norman Partridge's eponymous novel, Dark Harvest concerns a specter named Sawtooth Jack who goes up against violent gangs of boys hoping to take down the supernatural creature once and for all. The horror movie boasts a stellar cast, with the likes of Elizabeth Reaser, Jeremy Davies, Luke Kirby, and Ezra Buzzington, but the upcoming scary movie now has a limited one-night-only theatrical release on October 11, 2023, through Alamo Drafthouse before a digital release on October 13. Night of the Hunted is a new horror movie arriving on Shudder later this year. From director Franck Khalfoun (Amityville: The Awakening), Night of the Hunted stars Camille Rowe as a young woman who becomes caught in deadly events at night after stopping at a gas station. The horror movie releasing on Shudder on October 20, 2023, means subscribers can experience the new thrilling story right before Halloween. Five Nights at Freddy's has been in development for close to a decade, and the announcement that it would be released in 2023 came as quite a surprise. The movie is based on the popular video game of the same name, which is about a nighttime employee of Freddy Fazbear's Pizza, a Chuck E. Cheese's-inspired children's restaurant. The animatronic mascots of the restaurant come to life and kill anyone in the restaurant after midnight. The Five Nights at Freddy's cast includes Josh Hutcherson, Elizabeth Lail, and Matthew Lillard, and it promises to be one of the most bizarre new horror movies of 2023. Netflix is participating in the 2023 horror movie release schedule with Sister Death. The Spanish horror movie comes from director Paco Plaza and is a prequel to his 2017 horror movie Verónica. Sister Death follows a nun named Narcisa (Aria Bedmar) as she joins a school to teach young girls before unexpected events occur. Those looking for some non-American scary stories around Halloween can look no further than Sister Death. After a children's fantasy movie and a documentary, Thanksgiving marks a return to horror for Hostel director Eli Roth, several years after 2018's Death Wish. The upcoming 2023 scary movie Thanksgiving follows a serial killer in Massachusetts who attempts to make a carving board out of unsuspecting victims. Just like Machete and Hobo with a Shotgun, it is based on one of the Grindhouse fake trailers in the Robert Rodriguez and Quentin Tarantino collaboration from 2007. While a horror movie might not evoke the spirit of the season, Thanksgiving is expected to be released close to its eponymous holiday. In addition to all the scary movies still to come this year, there have also been dozens already released. Here are the 2023 horror movies that were previously released in theaters or on a streaming service: M3GAN on January 6, 2023 Candy Land on January 6, 2023 The Price We Pay on January 10, 2023 The Offering on January 13, 2023 Skinamarink on January 13, 2023 The Devil Conspiracy on January 13, 2023 There's Something Wrong With the Children on January 17, 2023 Infinity Pool on January 27, 2023 Fear on January 27, 2023 Blood on January 31, 2023 Knock at the Cabin on February 3, 2023 Murder, Anyone? on February 7, 2023 Mean Spirited on February 7, 2023 Attachment on February 9, 2023 The Outwaters on February 9, 2023 Daughter on February 10, 2023 Consecration on February 10, 2023 The Way Out on February 10, 2023 She Came From the Woods on February 10, 2023 Husersa: The Bone Woman on February 13, 2023 Swallowed on February 14, 2023 Winnie-the-Pooh: Blood and Honey on February 15, 2023 We Have A Ghost on February 24, 2023 Bunker on February 24, 2023 Wolf Garden on February 28, 2023 Spoonful of Sugar on March 2, 2023 Hunt Her, Killer Her on March 3, 2023 Children of the Corn on March 3, 2023 Unseen on March 7, 2023 Sound of Silence on March 9, 2023 Scream VI on March 10, 2023 Stalker on March 24, 2023 Followers on March 24, 2023 Adalynn on March 28, 2023 Enys Men on March 31, 2023 Summoning Sylvia on March 31, 2023 Malum on March 31, 2023 Forest of Death on March 31, 2023 The Unheard on March 31, 2023 You're Killing Me on April 7, 2023 Renfield on April 14, 2023 The Pope's Exorcist on April 14, 2023 Phenomena on April 14, 2023 Nefarious on April 14, 2023 Nightmare Radio: The Night Stalker on April 18, 2023 Evil Dead Rise on April 21, 2023 The Tank on April 21, 2023 The Black Demon on April 28, 2023 Clock on April 28, 2023 Influencer on May 26, 2023 Tin & Tina on May 26, 2023 The Wrath of Becky on May 26, 2023 The Boogeyman on June 2, 2023 Follow Her on June 2, 2023 Brooklyn 45 on June 9, 2023 The Angry Black Girl And Her Monster on June 9, 2023 The Blackening on June 16, 2023 Run Rabbit Run on June 28, 2023 Insidious: The Red Door on July 7, 2023 The Breach on July 11, 2023 Final Cut on July 14, 2023 Cobweb on July 21, 2023 Sympathy For The Devil on July 28, 2023 The Haunted Mansion on July 28, 2023 The Last Voyage of the Demeter on August 11, 2023 Slotherhouse on August 30, 2023 Perpetrator on September 1, 2023 Beaten to Death on September 1, 2023 The Nun 2 on September 8, 2023 Good Boy on September 8, 2023 Megalomaniac on September 8, 2023 Talk to Me on September 12, 2023 Satanic Hispanics on September 14, 2023 A Haunting In Venice on September 15, 2023 No One Will Save You on September 22, 2023 It Lives Inside on September 22, 2023 Saw X on September 29, 2023 Sort byList orderList orderAlphabeticalIMDb ratingPopularityNumber of ratingsRelease dateRuntimeDate addedYou have no recently viewed pages 2NetflixWhen it premieres: January 6, 2023 on NetflixWhat it's about: This ominous movie follows a detective named Augustus Landor (Christian Bale) who is investigating the homicide of a West Point cadet. When he realizes the victim's fellow cadets won't help him solve the case, Augustus enlists the help of one cadet, a young man known as Edgar Allan Poe (Harry Melling) — yes, that Edgar Allan Poe.FYI, Harry Melling is best-known for playing the vile Dudley Dursley in the Harry Potter movies, so getting to see him in a totally different type of role sounds like a real treat.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on NetflixAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below3Courtesy of PeacockWhen it premieres: January 13, 2023 on PeacockWhat it's about: Two friends decide to quarantine at a secluded lake house during the early months of the COVID-19 pandemic. Unfortunately, they're not alone and soon find themselves being stalked by a sinister person.Kevin Williamson, aka the writer of Scream, co-wrote this movie with Katelyn Crabb. The film stars Gideon Adlon, who played Becca on Netflix's canceled-too-soon series, The Society.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Peacock4Lionsgate Home EntertainmentWhen it premieres: January 17, 2023 On DemandWhat it's about: Featuring Aaron Samuels from Mean Girls, aka actor Jonathan Bennett, this Colton Tran-directed horror film follows five friends who get snowed in at an isolated cabin over New Year's Eve and slowly start to go mad.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Prime VideoAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below5Paramount Pictures; MGM+When it premieres: January 17, 2023 on MGM+What it's about: Two sets of couples go on a weekend trip with their kids, but the fun times don't last after the children disappear into the woods. When the kids are found, one of the adults believes something sinister and supernatural is going on with them.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Prime VideoStream it now on MGM+Advertisement - Continue Reading Below7Neon via @neonrated/InstagramWhen it premieres: January 27, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: If you missed seeing Mia Goth play super creepy in films like X and its prequel, Pearl, then this sci-fi thriller is for you.Featuring Mia and Big Little Lies star Alexander Skarsgård, this film follows a wealthy couple enjoying a vacation on an island resort. However, after an accident happens outside the resort grounds that turns their happy world upside, they must fight for survival.The society's zero-tolerance policy for crime leaves them two options: be executed or pay an ungodly amount of money to watch yourself die. Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Hulu8BayView Entertainment; IFC Midnight; ShudderWhen it premieres: Streaming exclusively on Shudder February 2, 2023 (Release in theaters began January 13, 2023)What it's about: In the middle of the night, two siblings awake and learn their father is missing and their house's doors and windows are gone. As the night progresses, the kids notice that more objects in their home begin vanishing, too.If you think this is going to be like other horror movies you've seen, guess again.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on ShudderAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below9Universal PicturesWhen it premieres: February 3, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: A vacationing family of three minding their own business are soon taken hostage by a gang of four mysterious strangers. According to them, the family must make a choice to stop the apocalypse from happening.This M. Night Shyamalan-directed movie that stars Harry Potter's Rupert Grint is based on Paul Tremblay's 2018 novel, The Cabin at the End of the World.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Peacock10Altitude Film Distribution; Fathom EventsWhen it premieres: February 15, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: Winnie-the-Pooh and Piglet are NOT your friends in this slasher movie about the Hundred Acre Wood characters. After Christopher Robin (Nikolai Leon) leaves his childhood friends to go to college, they feel abandoned and quickly turn murderous. Their rampage hits a new high, though, when Christopher eventually returns to the forest to introduce his old friends to his new wife.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Prime VideoAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below11Universal PicturesWhen it premieres: February 24, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: What's more terrifying than coming face-to-face with a bear? Coming face-to-face with a bear that's high on cocaine and "out of its mind."Based on a true story (yes, really!), this horror-comedy follows a bear who consumed a bunch of coke and goes on a drug-fueled killing spree.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Peacock12RLJE Films; ShudderWhen it premieres: March 3 (in theaters), March 21 (On Demand and digital)What it's about: Creepy kids go on a killing spree in a small Nebraska town after the adults ruin the community's crops. However, one teen refuses to join the gang of killer kids, which quickly creates tension in the town.Watch the NSFW trailer hereStream it now on ShudderAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below13Paramount PicturesWhen it premieres: March 10, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: A follow-up to the 2022 smash hit Scream, this sixth installment follows the four survivors who ditch the fictional town of Woodsboro to start a new life in New York City. Naturally, though, they can't escape Ghostface's clutches.Wednesday star Jenna Ortega reprises her role as Tara, and Scream 4's Hayden Panettiere returns to the franchise as Kirby. Unfortunately, the saga's beloved "final girl," Sidney Prescott (Neve Campbell), will not return due to disagreements over salary.The new teaser reveals that Ghostface has followed the survivors to Manhattan, as they ride a crowded subway car on Halloween night. With most everyone dressed in costume, it's almost easy to miss the masked villain — but then they strike. Watch the trailer here Stream it now on Paramount+14Sony Pictures ReleasingWhen it premieres: April 14, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: Russell Crowe stars as real-life figure Father Gabriele Amorth, a priest who performed more than 100,000 exorcisms before he passed away in 2016.This film is inspired by his one of his cases about a possessed boy and the centuries-old conspiracy the Vatican has tried to keep secret.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Prime VideoAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below15Universal PicturesWhen it premieres: April 14, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: Remember when the entire internet freaked out over those pics of Nicolas Cage walking around New Orleans dressed as Dracula? Well, it was for this movie. For those who don't know the original Dracula story by Bram Stoker (or haven't seen the 1931 Universal classic), Renfield is Dracula's henchman.Renfield is a horror-comedy that follows the exploits of Renfield (Nicholas Hoult), who ditches his job working for Dracula (Nicolas Cage) after he falls in love with a traffic cop named Rebecca Quincy (Awkwafina).Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Peacock16A24When it premieres: April 21, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: If you prefer "elevated horror," aka "scary but with complex emotional and thematic underpinnings" like Jenna Ortega's character describes in the opening of Scream, then this is the movie for you.Written and directed by Ari Aster, the same person who gave us Hereditary and Midsommar, his new film follows the life of a successful entrepreneur who has some serious mommy issues. How does that plot make for a scary movie? Check out the bonkers trailer below and see for yourself.Watch the trailer hereBuy it now on Prime VideoAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below17Alon Amir/Courtesy of Warner Bros. PicturesWhen it premieres: April 21, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: The fifth installment in the Evil Dead franchise, this movie is about two estranged sisters whose reunion is cut short when they're forced to battle sinister creatures known as Deadites.Watch the trailer here Stream it now on Max18HuluWhen it premieres: April 28, 2023 on HuluWhat it's about: Glee's Dianna Agron stars in this movie about a woman who, pressured to have children, agrees to participate in a clinical trial to fix her seemingly broken biological clock.Watch the trailer hereStream it now on HuluAdvertisement - Continue Reading Below1920th Century StudiosWhen it premieres: June 2, 2023 in theatersWhat it's about: Based on the short story of the same name by Stephen King, The Boogeyman is about two siblings who are reeling from the death of the mother. But when an ominous presence enters their lives, they beg their grieving father to take heed before something terrible happens.Watch the trailer here20QuiverWhen it premieres: June 2, 2023 in theaters and On DemandWhat it's about: This indie thriller shows the true horrors of social media. Jess, a successful streamer who secretly films people and posts those clips online, is hired by Tom to finish a screenplay. The first red flag? They do so in a secluded cabin. The second red flag? Tom is definitely not what he seems. How far would you go for fame?Watch the trailer hereStream it now on Prime VideoStacey GrantSenior EditorStacey Grant is a senior editor at Seventeen who runs the brand's Snapchat Discover channel. She also covers entertainment topics specializing in nostalgia, such as classic '90s and '00s Disney Channel and Nickelodeon content.Watch Next Advertisement - Continue Reading Below 2023's horror movie schedule is filled with both established franchises and fresh, original ideas, promising a thrilling and diverse lineup for horror enthusiasts. From a highly anticipated Exorcist sequel to a time-traveling horror-comedy, the upcoming releases offer a range of captivating storylines and casts that will surely leave audiences on the edge of their seats. The booming success of horror films in recent years makes 2023 a promising year for horror fans, with plenty of scares and surprises in store. All the upcoming horror movies of 2023 represent an epic slate of frightening features that offers a variety of chills for every kind of moviegoer. 2022 was a solid year for horror, and for every tonally awkward failure like Texas Chainsaw Massacre, there was a Scream, Nope, or Fresh to remind viewers that the genre still has endless potential. 2023's horror movie schedule continues the upward trend for the genre, setting up the 2020s as a golden decade for audiences who enjoy a good scare. 2023's horror movies see a new entry in the Insidious film series, and legendary franchises like The Exorcist are also making a comeback. Though established horror properties are well-represented, it is the wholly original movies that have generated the most buzz as plenty of fresh ideas flood the screen. The genre is thriving so much that even Disney is getting in on the horror movie action, albeit in a much more family-friendly way. While some are more noteworthy than others, the upcoming horror movie schedule promises to make 2023 a banner year for the genre. Related 2023's best horror movie Talk to Me has become a huge box office hit, providing even more proof of the genre's impressive financial comeback. The Exorcist: Believer — October 6, 2023 As if rebooting one beloved horror cinema franchise wasn’t enough, Halloween 2018’s David Gordon Green is hoping lightning will strike twice with a sequel to 1973’s iconic classic, The Exorcist. Few 2023 scary movies have as many expectations as The Exorcist: Believer and it will be tough for any sequel to recreate the impact of William Friedkin’s terrifying original. However, if anyone can make an Exorcist sequel/reboot work, it’s Green and his Halloween team. The Blumhouse production arrives in October 2023 with a cast that includes Leslie Odom Jr. as a man who is seeking help for a possessed child and original Exorcist star, Ellen Burstyn. Paramount expands the Stephen King universe in October 2023 with Pet Sematary: Bloodlines. The movie is a prequel to 2019's Pet Sematary and follows a young Jud Crandall, played by John Lithgow previously, as he discovers the infamous supernatural cemetery. Jackson White now takes over as the young Jud to headline a cast that includes David Duchovny and Pam Grier, among others. Pet Sematary: Bloodlines marks the directorial debut of Lindsey Anderson Beer, who co-wrote the script with Jeff Buhler. The Pet Sematary prequel debuts on Paramount+ exclusively on October 6, 2023. Totally Killer is a new horror movie in 2023 from Jason Blum and Blumhouse. It stars Kiernan Shipka as a daughter who travels back in time to team-up with a younger version of her mom, played by Olivia Holt, to defeat the Sweet Sixteen Killer. Totally Killer is a comedy horror movie from director Nahnatchka Khan (Always Be My Maybe) and also includes Julie Bowen and Randall Park among its cast. The scary movie arrives on Prime Video on October 6, 2023. Dark Harvest has had several scrapped released dates, with the most recent being September 22, 2022. Based on Norman Partridge's eponymous novel, Dark Harvest concerns a specter named Sawtooth Jack who goes up against violent gangs of boys hoping to take down the supernatural creature once and for all. The horror movie boasts a stellar cast, with the likes of Elizabeth Reaser, Jeremy Davies, Luke Kirby, and Ezra Buzzington, but the upcoming scary movie now has a limited one-night-only theatrical release on October 11, 2023, through Alamo Drafthouse before a digital release on October 13. Night of the Hunted is a new horror movie arriving on Shudder later this year. From director Franck Khalfoun (Amityville: The Awakening), Night of the Hunted stars Camille Rowe as a young woman who becomes caught in deadly events at night after stopping at a gas station. The horror movie releasing on Shudder on October 20, 2023, means subscribers can experience the new thrilling story right before Halloween. Five Nights at Freddy's has been in development for close to a decade, and the announcement that it would be released in 2023 came as quite a surprise. The movie is based on the popular video game of the same name, which is about a nighttime employee of Freddy Fazbear's Pizza, a Chuck E. Cheese's-inspired children's restaurant. The animatronic mascots of the restaurant come to life and kill anyone in the restaurant after midnight. The Five Nights at Freddy's cast includes Josh Hutcherson, Elizabeth Lail, and Matthew Lillard, and it promises to be one of the most bizarre new horror movies of 2023. Netflix is participating in the 2023 horror movie release schedule with Sister Death. The Spanish horror movie comes from director Paco Plaza and is a prequel to his 2017 horror movie Verónica. Sister Death follows a nun named Narcisa (Aria Bedmar) as she joins a school to teach young girls before unexpected events occur. Those looking for some non-American scary stories around Halloween can look no further than Sister Death. After a children's fantasy movie and a documentary, Thanksgiving marks a return to horror for Hostel director Eli Roth, several years after 2018's Death Wish. The upcoming 2023 scary movie Thanksgiving follows a serial killer in Massachusetts who attempts to make a carving board out of unsuspecting victims. Just like Machete and Hobo with a Shotgun, it is based on one of the Grindhouse fake trailers in the Robert Rodriguez and Quentin Tarantino collaboration from 2007. While a horror movie might not evoke the spirit of the season, Thanksgiving is expected to be released close to its eponymous holiday. In addition to all the scary movies still to come this year, there have also been dozens already released. Here are the 2023 horror movies that were previously released in theaters or on a streaming service: M3GAN on January 6, 2023 Candy Land on January 6, 2023 The Price We Pay on January 10, 2023 The Offering on January 13, 2023 Skinamarink on January 13, 2023 The Devil Conspiracy on January 13, 2023 There's Something Wrong With the Children on January 17, 2023 Infinity Pool on January 27, 2023 Fear on January 27, 2023 Blood on January 31, 2023 Knock at the Cabin on February 3, 2023 Murder, Anyone? on February 7, 2023 Mean Spirited on February 7, 2023 Attachment on February 9, 2023 The Outwaters on February 9, 2023 Daughter on February 10, 2023 Consecration on February 10, 2023 The Way Out on February 10, 2023 She Came From the Woods on February 10, 2023 Husersa: The Bone Woman on February 13, 2023 Swallowed on February 14, 2023 Winnie-the-Pooh: Blood and Honey on February 15, 2023 We Have A Ghost on February 24, 2023 Bunker on February 24, 2023 Wolf Garden on February 28, 2023 Spoonful of Sugar on March 2, 2023 Hunt Her, Killer Her on March 3, 2023 Children of the Corn on March 3, 2023 Unseen on March 7, 2023 Sound of Silence on March 9, 2023 Scream VI on March 10, 2023 Stalker on March 24, 2023 Followers on March 24, 2023 Adalynn on March 28, 2023 Enys Men on March 31, 2023 Summoning Sylvia on March 31, 2023 Malum on March 31, 2023 Forest of Death on March 31, 2023 The Unheard on March 31, 2023 You're Killing Me on April 7, 2023 Renfield on April 14, 2023 The Pope's Exorcist on April 14, 2023 Phenomena on April 14, 2023 Nefarious on April 14, 2023 Nightmare Radio: The Night Stalker on April 18, 2023 Evil Dead Rise on April 21, 2023 The Tank on April 21, 2023 The Black Demon on April 28, 2023 Clock on April 28, 2023 Influencer on May 26, 2023 Tin & Tina on May 26, 2023 The Wrath of Becky on May 26, 2023 The Boogeyman on June 2, 2023 Follow Her on June 2, 2023 Brooklyn 45 on June 9, 2023 The Angry Black Girl And Her Monster on June 9, 2023 The Blackening on June 16, 2023 Run Rabbit Run on June 28, 2023 Insidious: The Red Door on July 7, 2023 The Breach on July 11, 2023 Final Cut on July 14, 2023 Cobweb on July 21, 2023 Sympathy For The Devil on July 28, 2023 The Haunted Mansion on July 28, 2023 The Last Voyage of the Demeter on August 11, 2023 Slotherhouse on August 30, 2023 Perpetrator on September 1, 2023 Beaten to Death on September 1, 2023 The Nun 2 on September 8, 2023 Good Boy on September 8, 2023 Megalomaniac on September 8, 2023 Talk to Me on September 12, 2023 Satanic Hispanics on September 14, 2023 A Haunting In Venice on September 15, 2023 No One Will Save You on September 22, 2023 It Lives Inside on September 22, 2023 Saw X on September 29, 2023 It didn’t take long for 2023 to find its new scream queen: M3GAN, the Certified Fresh horror hit released the first week of the year, representing another strike of success for Blumhouse. But actress Jenna Ortega (who we proclaimed a Golden Year winner in our Golden Tomato Awards for her contributions to the dark genre arts) took back the crown with Scream VI in March (see where it ranks in the Scream franchise). In this guide to the newest scary movies, we’ll rank every week the best horror movies of 2023, which through the early months saw Knock at the Cabin (from director M. Night Shyamalan), Brandon Cronenberg’s Infinity Pool, and viral curiosity Skinamarink. April revved things up with the return of Evil Dead in Rise, and May saw the latest in the long factory line of Stephen King adaptations, The Boogeyman. But, for critics, the one to beat this year is Mexico’s Huesera: The Bone Woman, the body-horror directorial debut of Michelle Garza Cervera. Then it was a summer of screams with another A24 breakout, Australia’s Talk to Me, as the major studios chugged along with Haunted Mansion, Insidious: The Red Key, and The Blackening. With the fall came more from The Conjuring universe with The Nun 2, Saw X, David Gordon Green’s The Exorcist: Believer, and then Five Nights at Freddy’s breaking records Halloween weekend. Check back weekly as we rank the best new horror movies of the 2023, with Certified Fresh films first, followed by Fresh and then the morbidly Rotten. Recently added: Thanksgiving, Hell House LLC Origins: The Carmichael Manor, Sister Death, Suitable Flesh, Five Nights at Freddy’s, The Exorcist: Believer, Totally Killer, The Conference, When Evil Lurks. #1 When Evil Lurks (2023) 96% Critics Consensus: A hard-hitting horror film whose surface-level frights are just as engaging as its thematic concerns, When Evil Lurks marks a viscerally unsettling addition to the possession horror canon. #7 Brooklyn 45 (2023) 91% Critics Consensus: Although its story can feel circuitous and a bit baggy, Brooklyn 45's character-driven period horror is elevated by some excellent performances. #8 Totally Killer (2023) 86% Critics Consensus: Totally Killer may not take full advantage of its promising conceit, but this time-traveling horror/sci-fi mashup is still enjoyable overall. #15 Suitable Flesh (2023) 84% Critics Consensus: Campy and creepy, Suitable Flesh delivers visceral, '80s-inspired horror topped off by game performances from Barbara Crampton and Heather Graham. #16 Thanksgiving (2023) 84% Critics Consensus: Combining belly-busting humor with delightfully over-the-top gore, Thanksgiving is a feast for grindhouse fans. #18 No One Will Save You (2023) 83% Critics Consensus: A home invasion thriller with an extraterrestrial twist, No One Will Save You serves up more genre fun from writer-director Brian Duffield -- and proves Kaitlyn Dever doesn't need much dialogue to command the screen. #20 Enys Men (2022) 79% Critics Consensus: If its story's mysteries are ultimately less compelling than they might seem, Enys Men's retro aesthetic and intriguingly abstract visuals make this a chilly treat for horror fans. #21 Saw X (2023) 81% Critics Consensus: Led by a franchise-best performance from Tobin Bell, Saw X reinvigorates the series with an installment that has a surprising amount of heart to go with all the gore. #24 The Offering (2022) 76% Critics Consensus: Within the outline of its fairly standard story, The Offering puts a unique -- and often genuinely scary -- spin on demonic possession horror tropes. #27 Murder, Anyone? (2022) 100% #35 Malum (2023) 81% Critics Consensus: Malum lures you to clock in for another Mason-esque Last Shift at a haunted police station with sheer blunt lore and gore. #38 Swallowed (2022) 82% Critics Consensus: Although its second half is difficult to digest, Swallowed is an admirably unusual -- and overall effective -- mixture of body horror and romance. #44 Clock (2023) 79% Critics Consensus: While Clock may strain some viewers' suspension of disbelief, it's a mostly effective attempt to view reproductive pressures through a chilling horror lens. #52 Skinamarink (2022) 74% Critics Consensus: Skinamarink can be more confounding than frightening, but for viewers able or willing to dial into its unique wavelength, this unsettling film will be difficult to shake. #59 It Lives Inside (2023) 64% Critics Consensus: Effective horror with a strong core of social commentary, It Lives Inside is an eerily compelling calling card for filmmaker Bishal Dutta in his feature-length debut. #62 Renfield (2023) 58% Critics Consensus: Although it fails to take full advantage of its committed stars and killer premise, Renfield's batty horror-comedy blend sinks in just enough to leave an impression. #63 Blood (2022) 59% Critics Consensus: Blood has a handful of solid scares, but a narrative that fails to truly coagulate makes this half-empty vial of vampire horror difficult to recommend. #68 The Nun II (2023) 51% Critics Consensus: Scarier than its predecessor, The Nun II makes for an entertaining addition to the Conjuring franchise despite not being the most original horror sequel. #73 The Pope's Exorcist (2023) 51% Critics Consensus: Dominus Crowe! The Pope's Exorcist is standard-issue holy horror in most respects, but its star's sanctified performance will be the answer to some viewers' prayers. #77 Consecration (2023) 42% Critics Consensus: Despite being blessed with Jena Malone in the lead, Consecration serves up Catholic-themed horror that's far more hoary than hallowed. #81 Run Rabbit Run (2023) 38% Critics Consensus: Run Rabbit Run boasts some powerhouse performances, but they're largely overwhelmed by a thin plot and overreliance on stale horror tropes. #84 The Black Demon (2023) 28% Critics Consensus: A small shark in a big pond of man-eating legends, The Black Demon bites off more than it can chew, leaving little carnage for the audience to feast on. #87 The Exorcist: Believer (2023) 22% Critics Consensus: The Exorcist: Believer earns points for trying to take the franchise back to its terrifying roots, but a lack of new ideas -- and scares -- make this an inauspicious start to a planned new trilogy. 2023 was a unique year for horror, with films ranging from microbudget fare to Hollywood sequels making headlines. Before revealing the top spots, here are some honorable mentions: “Saw X” — Even though it’s the 10th chapter in the long-running franchise, “Saw X” takes a decidedly back-to-basics approach by going back in time and making the menacing Jigsaw killer, John Kramer, the protagonist. After he’s duped into paying for a fake miracle surgery to cure his cancer, Kramer seeks revenge on the faux doctors in the only way he knows how. The twists are plentiful and the traps are stomach-churning, and by going back in time, the film dodges some of the overly-complicated plotting of previous chapters. “M3GAN” — Although it was saddled with a PG-13 rating, America’s new favorite killer doll proved to be a box office sensation and a fun theatrical watch. Owing plenty to the 2019 reboot of “Child’s Play,” this tech-gone-wrong feature was filled with enough viral moments and GIF-able kills to keep the momentum going through a thin plot. Hopefully the sequel will capitalize more off of Allison Williams’ strong performance and create an even darker experience. “Sick” — “Scream” creator Kevin Williamson co-wrote this low-profile COVID movie, a cozy mystery that felt right at home on streaming. Set primarily in one location, the claustrophobia of the central house made for a bloodthirsty experience able to gloss over budgetary restrictions. Although the ending got a little crazy, it’s nice to see a throwback slasher go for broke, with Williamson clearly having a ball again. “The Wrath of Becky” — This amusing and violent genre picture stars Lulu Wilson as teenage assassin Becky, who targets Proud Boy-esque goons in the sequel to the 2020 neo nazi-killing first feature. Seann William Scott is a hoot as the leader of the all-male organization that is about to cause serious destruction if Becky doesn’t get to them first. They’ve stolen her dog and killed her only friend, setting the stage for some “Home Alone” meets “John Wick” mayhem. The final act ratchets up the tension and a funny coda begs for a sequel.

- http://zlato-eu.space/upload/files/85043555284.pdf
- fuxapane
- siemens iq300 reset atma
- http://snkpost.com/userfiles/file/pudelitijamagif-nadapiwazofu.pdf
- how much does a beginner viola cost
- http://apcmagon.com/userfiles/55959653842.pdf